What should the default prefixes for MySQL tables be? I recently started working on a PHP application that will have to deal with a fair amount of MySQL. I have decided to build everything on top of the PHP PDO library, so I figured I would use that to handle all my database interactions. The problem is, I am not sure what the "default" prefix to use for table names when doing normal CRUD operations. For example, when using the PDO object to create a new table (INSERT) should the table name be "Table" or "Tbl" or something else? In the end, I will be dealing with a lot of tables in the application, and would like to have a default prefix (or no prefix at all) when I do anything in MySQL. Is this a valid concern, and is there a standard set of prefixes that I should use? The 82157476af
